

Happy Holidays from the Pension Rights Center

Dear Friend,

'Tis the season to celebrate – and to ask for your support.

We know that you receive countless requests for year-end contributions. But if you are receiving this e-mail you know that the Pension Rights Center isn't like other organizations.

We're small and strategic – creative and committed – and passionate about making sure that people get the retirement benefits they have earned – and that they keep them. Whether it's –

- Former obstetrical nurses who have just learned that their pension checks will stop because their “church plan” has run out of money;
- Widows who have been told by their husbands' pension plan that, because of a mistake years ago, they owe the plan thousands of dollars;
- Retired truck drivers, musicians, iron workers, and laborers who are fighting to keep and restore their hard-earned pensions;
- Divorced women who do not know how to go about getting their court-awarded shares of their ex-husband's retirement benefits;
- Former assembly line workers who can't find the 401(k) plans they contributed to early in their careers
- Newspaper reporters who have been told that their former employer has no records showing their rights to retirement benefits;

Or any of the other 2,500 people who have contacted us for help this year alone.

They know we are there for them.

They know we will use our legal expertise, our advocacy skills, and long-standing relationships with the media and policy makers to go to bat for them, and that we have a 43-year-long track record showing that we can win for them and countless others.

But we can only do this with your support.

Thank you and Happy Holidays!

Karen, Karen, Emily, Emily, Kyle, Jane, Lisa, Victoria, Norman, Bill, and David.
